Approaches to Community Engagement in the Arts

December 2022

ABA's Research Process

Core Research Question

What are the structural transformations and activities organizations have undertaken to become authentically community focused?

Interview Questions Themes

- Ark and journey of community engagement
- Catalyst and leaders of change
- Types of programs/ flagship initiatives
- Partnership tiers and building trust
- Capability sharing
- Budget and funding
- Staffing
- Board and leadership alignment
- Measuring impact
- Advice and challenges

Other Sources and Benchmarks

- Analysis of organizational websites, missions and values
- Overview of organizational programs and partnerships
- IRS 990 and Charity Reporting forms for budgeting and funding

Interview Participants

Key Takeaways From Our Calls

- Defining what community engagement is not so clear cut, which leads to different approaches and staffing structures to lead these efforts.
- Organizations should not assume the whole staff and board will automatically be aligned with community engagement efforts, especially as these activities tend not be major sources of earned income. Leaders must commit to making community engagement part of the core mission and all major strategies.
- There is no single way to build a strategy around values-based services to the community. Organizations tend to informally choose one “pillar” for their efforts (artistic programming, education, internal DEI&A, etc.).
- Developing authentic partnerships is a multi-year process. It takes 1-2 years before you are in a position to ask for or offer anything, and many organizations take a very personal approach to building partnerships.
- You can't always wait for funding. Several organizations reported moving ahead with community engagement initiatives without having specific funding for it, instead using existing operating budgets. This has the added benefit of emphasizing how core an activity community engagement is.
- Board & leadership investment is key. Not only does this ensure necessary support for the team members leading community engagement work, but also helps build partnerships at the leadership level, thereby making these relationships integrated and visible throughout the institution.
- Not all community members will be interested in your art form — and that's okay. Lowering barriers to your performance hall is not always enough, but you can still have impact and value off the stage.

Advice From Our Interviews- ‘Dos’

- Be Transparent

“One of the things we always try to do is to be really transparent, and do everything through lots of conversation and consultation. If the values, mission and vision of the organization are changing then we’ll really workshop it and talk it all through with staff members and young people and our community. Transparency and lots of conversations are key.”

- Focus on Depth

“Whatever metrics people are focusing on - focus on the depth of connection. That is going to be labor intensive - so you may need to accept that you’ll have fewer major flagship events. For example, we went from large banner moments instead to 65 different genuine community engagement moments. And at the root, that’s what community engagement is.”

- Be Adventurous

“One of the things we live by as is testing things out and doing them. Possibly not spending a lot of time talking about something, but just doing it in a small, low-risk way so that you can learn and do it at the same time. Then we get feedback from each stage.”

- Ensure the Whole Organization is Engaged

“Be really thoughtful about how you’re going to engage the entire organization on this work, otherwise it tends to feel like an offshoot and then you have a team working incredibly hard to do this meaningful work but not feeling the full support of the organization, and then others in the organization feeling like it’s additive rather than fully part of the mission of the organization.”

Advice From Our Interviews- ‘Don’ts’

- Don’t Rush

“I think a common mistake is probably just moving too fast. A lot of times that happens because we live in a society that values urgency, and this is a business that has very urgent, perfectionist relationships to time. A lot of times when our measures of success are particularly tied up with capitalism, it becomes really difficult to make the case for the work when the work may take years to complete in an authentic way. But it’s so worth it.”

- Don’t Fall into the False Dichotomy of Excellence vs. Community

“Often when people say “artistic excellence” it’s a very narrow perspective that doesn’t speak to most people. It’s a falsehood to say that nothing has to change to broaden our reach to the community. We do have to make room for different ideas and different versions of artistic excellence [...] So the way for me to boil it down is “artistic excellence for whom?” It might not have anything to do with the music - can be the audience experience.”

- Don’t Do Too Much all at Once

“There is so much opportunity out there, and so many exciting ways you could think of doing this project, that program, etc. so I’d be cautious about taking on too much all at once because then you get the mission creep issue, and you won’t have the resources and you lose the focus of “what are we doing this for?” The potential is there to be able to suddenly attract grants or fundraising, and then you have the tail wagging the dog, because you’re creating a program in response to the grant.”

- Don’t Start Partnerships by “Selling” to Them

“First you don’t ask anything from them. This is not transactional- “come to see us” or “why don’t you put this program in your library”. In my work we just opened the door to these people- get to know them before asking them anything [...] Be a friend first - get interested in what is important to them / what these institutions do.”

Working with Artists to Diversify Voices in the Field

Arts Commons TD Incubator Program Promotes Sector Diversity

Goal

Description Of Engagement

Results, past events etc.

Promoting a diverse artistic sector

Arts Commons Incubator, a first-of-its-kind professional artist development program was designed to support Calgary-based artists who reflect the diversity and vibrancy of the city. The Incubator will provide its cohort (25-35 artists) with a season of engagements under four themes: networking; professional development; mentorship; and paid live performance, exhibition, and teaching opportunities within Arts Commons initiatives.

Leveraging Arts Commons resources across four pillars:

Performance & Exhibition:

Cohort artists are given paid opportunities to connect their practice with audiences through Arts Commons Presents performances, galleries and/or Arts Commons Education initiatives.

Networking: Artists in the TD Incubator program are invited to meet fellow artists connected to Arts Commons and leaders across Calgary to discuss their work and challenge their practices.

Professional Development:

These events and workshops focus on career development and capacity building, artistic approaches to social change, and applying artistic practices to other areas of life, work, and culture.

Mentorship: Using Arts Commons' network of local and visiting artists, this element of the program builds relationships between participants and leaders in their fields of interest.

First cohort welcomed in 2021. Goal is to create a diverse pipeline for artists in Calgary and supporting the needs for arts education around the city. 2022-23 cohort includes 24 inter-disciplinary artists.

EXPERIENCE

Expanding the experiences onsite and around the stage

In this section we will look at case examples that demonstrate the opportunities and impact of changing and expanding the onsite experience:

- Reimagining the on-site experience to be less imposing and formal
- Creating spaces that are accessible to all, all the time
- Inviting audiences to deep dive into artistic works with ancillary events and opportunities for conversations
- Supporting the field beyond the stage with podcasts, and spaces for reflection

Redefining On-Site Experiences and Reducing “Formality”

Oakland Symphony’s Former Artistic Director Presents Unconventional Concerts

Goal	Getting audiences who are different together and building new attendance habits The Symphony's late music director Michael Morgan, really thought about audiences, and utilized the catalogue of music and commissions in service of them. His goal with his concerts was to see who was already in the audience, who wasn't and who needs to sit in the room together to create a more vibrant and inclusive viewing experience.
Description Of Engagement	Challenging artistic expectations <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Curated concerts that had two almost directly opposite themes/ styles or genres.• Building trust with audiences, “you’re going to like some things and dislike others, and that’s okay”• Bringing in diverse audiences helped to infuse a more active listening group Normalizing more relaxed experiences: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Encouraging clapping• Musicians in informal/ non-black tie attire• Food and beverage allowed in the hall• Dress code also loose, allowing audiences to enjoy experience as they want
Results, past events etc.	“The community that was created and the diversity in the room that was created was what made the artistic experience so special. Our audiences were well primed under the 30+ year leadership of Michael Morgan. Takes time to change habits, but results are really exciting.” – Mieko Hatano, Executive Director

“That permission to take it all in. I think that part of that permission, too, is about having different people in the room who have different attendance habits.”

-Mieko Hatano, Executive Director

“We approach this from an artistic-centered way, and it needs to be led by an artistic director who goes out in the community and understands what the community members want.”

-Mieko Hatano, Executive Director

Redefining On-Site Experiences Around Access

Battersea Arts Centre Becomes the First Relaxed Venue

Goal

To be radically inclusive across all events

Battersea Arts Centre's relaxed venue works to identify and dismantle the barriers faced by disabled people, based on the social model of disability. BAC has committed to being a relaxed venue throughout all their events- not just a few standalone performances. They have also made their works pay as you wish, to further reduce access barriers.

Description Of Engagement

What this looks like in practical and strategic terms:

- Permanent 'chill out space' in the building
- Availability of ear defenders
- Public commitment of 90% relaxed performances
- Public commitment of 90% captioned digital performances
- Consistent ongoing offers of other types of access performances (sensory, captions, interpreted performances etc.)
- Programming that reflects disability culture and disabled-led work
- Public commitment of 20% disabled-led work, with artistic control

Results, past events etc.

Results thus far match and exceed public commitments:

- 100% accessible digital performances
- Over 90% of in-person events were relaxed in the last year
- Across 2019 and 2020, 97% of performances were relaxed

“We start every performance with an announcement that you're free to come and go as you please, make noise. We have bean bag chairs, a chill out space. People get pre-show information, so they know what they're in for. We did a lot of work on the building to make it physically accessible.”

- Liz Moreton, Director of Creativity and Social Change

Providing Ancillary Experiences to Enrich Stage Performances

Woolly Mammoth Delivers Lobby Experiences and Curated Events to Expand Stage Experiences

Goal

Foster dialogue in connection with performance

For over a decade, the Connectivity Department has activated the civic conversations at the heart of Woolly's productions, through curated events, lobby experiences, and other content in collaboration with community partners.

Description Of Engagement

Expanded visitor on-site experiences for different entry points

Curated events are held in conjunction with ongoing performances. The Theatre invites thematically related and relevant community groups and partners to either present, exhibit, perform and/or share their insights on narrative themes presented on stage. These events are more for audience engagement.

Results, past events etc.

Woolly Mammoth has been offering curated experiences since the launch of their Connectivity program in 2009. These programs help cultivate an audience for a show where the material will be either personally or professionally relevant.

"House Light Up events, provided opportunities for more in-depth conversation about the work that might feature community partners coming in and being on panels or leading workshops, etc. And then also I would say that Connectivity at that time was very interested in this question of what was the entry point for a particular play, so a dramaturgical component."

- Kristen Jackson, Connectivity Director/ Associate Artistic Director

Going Beyond the Stage to Talk Diversity and Inclusion

Minnesota Opera's The Score Podcast Reviews Opera Through an Inclusion Lens

Goal

Opera seen through a new lens

- Hosted by Minnesota Opera lead Administrators
 - Lee Bynum (VP Impact)

Fostering access opportunities for different community groups

After looking at price discounts and special offers as a common tactic to increase access, we will look at case examples that demonstrate other ways to increase access:

- Leveraging digital access and tools like QR codes to push art beyond venue four-walls
- Targeting school groups to foster understanding with younger generations and creating curriculum connections for long-term engagement
- Inviting young people of all background to participate in hands-on music experiences as an entry into art and attendance

Leveraging Digital To Expand Access Beyond On-site Venues

ROCO on the Go Pushes their Work Out Beyond their Core Venues

Goal

Creating access to music across Houston

Over the past seventeen years ROCO has invested in performances, recordings, and distribution rights to provide free access to their music. During the pandemic, ROCO developed ROCO on the Go, where they weave music throughout the Houston community with QR codes.

Description Of Engagement

Scan QR codes for free music access

Posted across the city in non-traditional sites, visitors can easily scan QR codes to access curated playlists based on different adjectives and moods like joy, bold, soothing etc. The QR codes allow visitors to enjoy music from anywhere.

Results, past events etc.

Roco on the Go's first QR kiosks started along a local park's trails in October 2020. Since then, ROCO has partnered with 16 other area organizations, placing QRs in over 30 different facilities. Sites include: Texas Southern University, Texas Children's Hospital, The Menninger Clinic, Houston Botanic Gardens and ROCO's home-base venue, the Church of St. John the Divine in River Oaks.

“When we talk about community engagement, we use the umbrella term “access”. From our very founding, ROCO has developed a reputation to reduce barriers to access for all- creating accessible experiences for people with physical and neuro divergences, as well as removing price barrier and making our programs approachable and easy”

– Amy Gibbs, Managing Director

Serving Schools to Scaffold Understanding with Young Audiences

Spoleto Festival USA Targets Schools to Build Community Understanding and Access

Goal

Foster understanding and connections for students first

Spoleto Festival USA has focused a lot of their community efforts towards creating resources and partnerships with the local school system. By focusing on schools, they hope to encourage the next generation of viewers through active engagement and support, rather than just inviting them to performances without context.

Description Of Engagement

Providing resources and pre-show encounters:

Spoleto Festival USA actively connects with South Carolina schools and finds areas of alignment between their school curriculums and the performances from the festival. With the world premier of Omar, they developed a workbook for students, as well as worksheets and coloring pages providing access points and context of slavery in the world. After these initial introductions school groups were invited to attend for dedicated events and dress rehearsals.

Results, past events etc.

For the Omar project specifically, Spoleto Festival USA was able to share coloring books and worksheets with over 3800 students in one year across 17 different schools. Their hope is to expand this outreach and create deeper community ties with teachers, students and their parents.

Providing Hands-on Experiences For the Next Generation

Oakland Symphony’s MUSE Program Fosters Access to Music Experiences

Goal

Multiple Entry Points to Music Practice

By providing these programs free to participants, the Symphony ensures that students of all socio-economic background can have access to a variety of music education and enrichment activities.

“We want to develop a pipeline of music lovers, and we understand that music literacy is a step to equity and social justice.”
- Mieko Hatano, Executive Director

Battersea Arts Centre Seeks to Partner and Support Local Groups with Their Co-working Spaces

Goal	Supporting other local organizations With BAC's Scratch co-working hub, they hope to share their resources and put their spaces to service for smaller local organizations in need of space and meeting areas. They want to be more than an arts centre, but really a community shared space.
Description Of Engagement	Prioritizing values-aligned groups Currently BAC offers a variety of spaces for team meeting rooms, individual work, as well as larger conference halls etc. They are looking at expanding their offer specifically for values-aligned and smaller grassroots organizations who can invite their staff and colleagues to their spaces.
Results, past events etc.	“We really want to get local community organizations in this space who genuinely need this because they’re running their organizations very hand-to-mouth. We also want to have a diversity of organizations with different age ranges and from different pockets of the community so it feels like a vibrant space”. – Liz Moreton, Director of Creativity and Social Change

“One of the things we’re wanting to do is that we have a coworking space where local charities and organizations come to use desk space, but now we’re choosing partners who can use our larger rehearsal spaces so they can bring their communities into the building.”

- Liz Moreton, Director of Creativity and Social Change

PARTNERS

Developing tiered partnership to reach higher engagement
over time

In this section we will look at how organizations are approaching partnerships and the ways they ensure success and impact with reciprocal collaborators:

- Starting the conversations with empathy and humility
- Creating guiding principles for all partnerships
- Identifying internal preparedness for developing partnership
- Sharing authority and revising your processes to better engage and include community partners and participants

Building Trust: A Deeper Look

Whether a partnership is long-term or a short-term event/project, time spent building trust is crucial. We've gathered practices our interviewees shared to ensure a collaborative relationship founded on trust.

Phase 1

- Showing up to community events to build genuine relationships and listen
- Not offering anything – but thinking through what you want to understand about community members as you get to know them
- Building cultural competency into your organization by hiring from Latinx community
- Inviting community members to things and making clear your willingness to share your organization with them

Phase 2

- Assessing values alignment with potential partner organizations
- Coming to the table as equals to understand what you both can offer one another
- Changing your own processes to accommodate partners' needs
- Engaging with a few more transactional partners as you deepen your more values-aligned relationships

Phase 3

- Continuing regular assessment of the partnership from both sides
- Deepening the successful relationships with new programs, events, etc.
- Understanding when a partnership has reached its natural end-point

“It’s okay if not every partnership is long-term; some transactional relationships can still have value for your organization and partners.”

Starting Empathetic Conversations with Partners

OF/ BY/FOR ALL is a non-profit organization that is helping civic and cultural organizations become of, by and for their communities. They provide tools, community, accountability and coaching on radical inclusion and how to build truly reciprocal partnerships with community members.

Starting the conversation with The Partner Power Tool encourages a mindset shift from partner transaction to collaboration, where you actively empower and learn about your existing/ potential partners and thus foster partnerships built on trust and reciprocal interest.

Values behind this framework

- ✓ Partners success is our success
- ✓ It is critical to understand a community before building something for them
- ✓ Beginning with partner perspectives fosters empathy and trust
- ✓ Partner Power helps build a vision of success together
- ✓ Avoids falling into box ticking and imposing pre-established project ideas

Empathetic listening to learn about your community of interest

Questions to learn about the challenges they face

- What/ who inspires you?

Questions to learn about the values they hold

- What are you most concerned about in your community?

Questions to learn about the goals they are pursuing

- What is one of your life goals? ...

Questions to learn about the commitments they can make

- what is your schedule like?

Questions about what success looks like for your partners

- What does a great day look like for you?

CHALLENGES THEY FACE	VALUES THEY HOLD
GOALS THEY'RE PURSUING	COMMITMENTS THEY CAN MAKE

Co-Identifying Relevant Community Partners

Community Partnership Selection Process

Exhaust Existing Community Networks

Perform an internal scan of your artists and organization, including all board members, staff, and volunteers, to evaluate if they already have connections with key community constituents. Use these relationships as a starting access point into the community, relying on already built trust.

Research/Connect with New Community Partners

As the project begins to narrow its scope, ask artists to search for community partners who can fill the gaps of your existing networks. Do necessary research before introductions and beginning conversations.

Select Main Collaborator(s)

Together with artists, determine which community partner(s) will be your core collaborators in the project. Evaluate successful partnerships on their ability to hit hallmark characteristics, including alignment to the organization's mission and capacity to co-create the program (see right).

Alignment to Organization's Mission

Dependency

The artist/arts organization is critical for the partner's success, and vice versa

Shared Vision

The artist/arts organization project aligns to a core value of the partner

Reciprocity

Both sides have something to offer to help the other reach their respective goals

Partner Capacity to Co-Create and Sustain Project

Quality of Existing Assets

Resources the partner can provide, including funding and physical space for activities.

Presence of Champion Personnel

Key champions within the partner are the people who make the program happen. Have multiple points of contact in case of institutional turnover.

Originality of Work

Work provided is distinct and irreplaceable by other artists or organizations

Partner Ability/Authenticity

Geographic proximity, cultural context, coordination, and understanding of the target population

Creating Organizational Guiding Principles

University of Michigan Ginsberg Center: Establish Overarching Principles for Projects

OUR PRINCIPLES

WHAT WE DO MATTERS.
HOW WE DO IT MATTERS, TOO.

connecting civic learning across contexts

We support students' integrative learning, with an emphasis on reflection.

starting with community

We match community-identified priorities with U-M resources.

centering on equity

Our students, faculty and staff, and community partners all share their interests, goals, and expectations.

fostering long-term partnerships

We establish long-term relationships with our partners beyond the scope of a particular project or engagement.

acknowledging power

Our community partners are active agents with deep knowledge about their communities and practices.

moving from individual to collective action

We bring together parties with shared interests to amplify positive community impact.

To ensure project proposals followed their strategic plan's model of collective impact, the Center uses a set of 6 principles that proposals must align to.

These principles are part of the rubric for grading proposals and are presented to all applicants.

These principles are high-level, so they do not rule out specific projects but serve as an "invisible hand" for how to help proposals become more community-centered.

Bravo! Vail Music Festival Program Vetting Matrix

In implementing new engagement programs, Bravo! Vail uses 6 categories of program criteria to ensure new ideas meet their overall goals and values:

Identify Need or Opportunity <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Area of Bravo's mission we're not fulfilling? Interest/demand for the program? Is there a demonstrated need? 	Timing <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Time constraints on the program? Ample lead time to plan, fund, market, and execute properly?
Departmental Considerations <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Program further Bravo's engagement vision? Does it fit in 1+ of Bravo's engagement categories? If not, does Bravo need to create a new category? 	Evaluation and Metrics <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Have S.M.A.R.T. goals been defined? Has this program been tried before? What was the outcome and why? What are the measurable outcomes that can be assessed to determine success?
Organizational Alignment <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Will program further Bravo's org mission? Will the program and its impacts align with Bravo's core values? Does the program satisfy X number of Bravo's hallmarks? 	Resources <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Financial: program cost; seed funding; sufficient funding to sustain 3 years? Community: appropriate community stakeholders informed and on board? Human: staff capacity to plan, market, and execute; need new staff/volunteers?

Each category is scored from (1) Definitely no to (4) Definitely yes.

If the total score is 6-14, the program idea is a "NO"; 15 is "MAYBE"; and 16-24 is "YES."

What Does It Look Like To Be Ready for Partnership?

When approaching a community or arts organization for a potential partnership, there are certain steps an organization must take to be prepared. Below we have adapted a framework of steps that Ballet Hispanico shared are important for them to see in any potential partner before agreeing to work together.

You've aligned your values

- ❑ Shared purpose: responsibility lies with the approaching organization to conduct research on the stated values of the community partner and to ensure alignment.
- ❑ Feasible goal: your goals for partnership with a community organization must be feasible within that organization's capabilities.

You've aligned your team

- ❑ Organization-wide buy-in: while leadership is often making the decision to partner, they must ensure that the full organization is aware of, understands, and is bought into the partnership to foster a welcoming environment.
- ❑ Cultural competence: the organization needs various diverse leaders, including several that represent the cultural group they would like to partner with, when approaching a new community partnership.
- ❑ Assigned ownership for coordination: the arts organization must ensure that they have an internal project coordinator for the partnership so that this work does not fall primarily on the partner.

You've aligned your assets

- ❑ Internal assessment: the arts institution has thought critically about the capabilities and assets your organization holds that can be of use to this specific partner organization.
- ❑ Ideas for a project plan that benefits both partners: the arts organization has developed thoughtful proposals for how the two partners might work together in ways that are mutually beneficial — and clearly outlines the resources they will dedicate to this work.

Adapting Your Process for Effective Partnership

On Site Opera Adapts Their Process for a More Enriching and Empowering Partner Experience

Goal	The partnership between On Site Opera (OSO) and Breaking Ground (BG) grew on a foundation of aligned missions. BG is an organization in New York that provides supportive housing for homeless and housing-vulnerable individuals. BG knows that the more community connection they can provide within the tenancy, the less likely it is that tenants will return to the streets. They were excited by this opportunity to partner with OSO that builds a chorus of tenants from BG’s buildings to perform alongside professional musicians and singers.

RESOURCES

Adopting different staffing and funding models to resource community efforts

In this section we will look at how organizations have modified their team structures and worked to prioritize and fund community efforts:

- Merging staff from different departments to create new departments around community and inclusion
- Testing models for cross-collaboration versus more separate and dedicated community teams
- Identifying the pros and cons of having a separate and dedicated community brand
- Visions and values that impact new leadership roles and titles
- Funding commonalities/ trends

Organizations Test Different Department Models

Minnesota Opera Merges Community & EDU Under a Single Department

Organizations Test Different Department Models

Battersea Arts Centre Reverts Back to Two Sperate Teams to Manage Overworking and Reinstate Accountability

Organizations Test Different Branding Models

Houston Grand Opera Repositioned their Community Work Back into their Master Brand

Created a dedicated community brand

HGOco

“The idea of making what had been Education and Outreach its own brand was the big shift, and what that required...But it started with the vision of the right person who was brought in to lead that transition”

- Molly Dill, COO

+ With its own brand HGOco could take on larger projects and productions

- With its own brand HGOco led to some confusion with the board and a lack of purpose and clarity

Repositioned HGOco under Opera’s master brand as “Community & Learning”

New Leadership Roles and Titles Emerge

Arts Commons Shift to Social Impact in their Vision and Programming with new Dedicated Staff

Values and vision changes at Arts Commons lead to a more mature programming department:

- Values shift started 13 years ago
- Organizational change in vision and mission to “Compassionate society through the arts” led to a revision of strategic priorities and resources for programming
- Currently in the process of refining organization’s future to lean into belief “that equitable access to the arts is a human right”

“A game changer was when we prioritized adding a dedicated staff member specifically to grow our social impact. The work within this area has snowballed over the past 5 years and has seeped into all of our programs and initiatives.”

- Jennifer Johnson, VP Programming

Programming Department, Led by VP of Programming

Presenting

- Manager, Presenting
- Programs Coordinator

Education

- Associate Director, Education
- Education Specialist

Social Impact

- Associate Director, Social Impact
- Visual & Media Arts Curator

Leadership positions and titles matter as a means to garner legitimacy for community engagement work within organization’s core services. Also helps to be more visible in organizational strategies, marketing, storytelling etc.

Additional Fundraising Most Often Needed to Support Community Efforts

Many start with certain core funding and then fundraise for additional support

“We have a certain level of work that we do on our core funding - we’ll run those certain things whatever the weather. But there are others that we can only do with additional funding.”

“Community engagement is baked into our programming operating costs. If we add new things, we aren’t looking at it as a separate area or something we have to fundraise for - of course we do that also, but really our funding comes from within our operational budgets.”

“We’ve gotten much better support from foundations. Much better return than trying to charge the individual user. So, we are definitely on a contributed income over earned income model.”

There is a strong case for community engagement exciting donor motivations

“We do have a finite amount of core money, so it’s just about our priorities. The argument is that prioritizing the community work enables us to do a lot more fundraising, which brings a lot more money back to our organization”

“It started with a core set of funded programs, but anything beyond that we have to fundraise for it. Now we’ve kind of shifted away from that, but that was the structure in the beginning...thinking of that as a way to excite funders who might not usually consider us, because we were reaching into the community in a new way.”

Some organization adopt a “cow-boy” mentality with program before funding

“Since I’ve been here our approach has been to fund this work with core operating funding. But also, for better or worse we don’t let funding hold us back. We take risks. Our programs may not always be fully underwritten, but we make it work. Being younger and more nimble allows us to be more flexible.”

“Being willing to accept greater risk and sometimes jump in with both feet and then once something gets going money finds itself”.

“We do believe that there’s a really strong case for support that we plan to dig into more in the coming years so we can get some of this work covered. But we’re a “leap before you look” kind of organization sometimes.”

Varying Website Structures To Publicize Community Work

Insights

- Overall websites are missing elements and nuances about community engagement that we gained from interviews
- Most websites don't highlight a lot of partnership work
- Combining community and education is a predominant model for classifying community activities on organizational websites
- Concerts and performances are often set apart from community work
- Most organizations seem to structure programs around demographics segments, such as youth, adult, school etc.
- There is a strong presence of apprenticeships and artists opportunities as part of community work
